TO HIS HONOR JAMES M. CURLEY,
Mayor of the City of Boston.

Sir:

The Trustees of the Public Library of the City of Boston present the following report of its condition and affairs for the year ending December 31, 1932, being the eighty-first annual report.

ORGANIZATION OF THE BOARD

The Corporation organized at the annual meeting on May 20, 1932 with the election of Mr. Ellery Sedgwick as President, Mr. John L. Hall as Vice President, and Miss Della Jean Deery as Clerk.

The term of Monsignor Arthur T. Connolly, who had served as a Trustee since 1916, expired on April 30. Father Connolly gave generously of time and attention to the Library, until his active participation in its work had to cease with the advent of failing health. His services were described and recognized in the following Resolution adopted by the Trustees and ordered spread upon the permanent records of the Corporation:

Monsignor Arthur Theodore Connolly was a Trustee of the Boston Public Library from June 15, 1916 to November 8, 1932. During this long term he was twice President of this Board, and has left behind him the respect and affection of his colleagues, who deeply sympathize with the limitations imposed by illness upon his eager spirit, and now take pleasure in recalling the beneficence of his work and counsel. Monsignor Connolly combined the enthusiasm of the amateur with the maturity of disciplined judgment. His companionship is pleasant to remember: his services not easy to forget.

His Eminence William Cardinal O'Connell was appointed a Trustee for the term of five years ending April 30, 1937.

In recognition of the service of Mr. Gordon Abbott as Trustee for the term which had expired in the preceding year, the Board adopted the following Resolution and ordered it spread upon the permanent records of the Corporation:

The Trustees of the Boston Public Library wish to place on their record fitting recognition of the services freely, generously, and persistently given by Gordon Abbott during the five years of his important service. From June 21, 1929 to June 28, 1930, Mr. Abbott was President of this Board, and retired on April 30, 1931, declining reappointment only on account of the pressure of other public duties. His term of office deserves especial remembrance, for it was owing largely to his vigilance and practical energy that the foundations of the Library were reestablished on new and adequate piling.

On February 1, 1932, Mr. Milton Edward Lord assumed office as Director of the Library, having been confirmed in this appointment by the Board on December 4, 1931.

BUDGET ESTIMATES

The estimates submitted on November 1, 1931 for the maintenance of the Library during the year 1932 were later amended and reduced. These estimates were as follows:

From special appropriations	126,345.78
From the income of trust funds	20,045.62

ADDITIONS TO THE LIBRARY

The number of volumes added to the Library during the year was 117,993, obtained chiefly by purchase, but in some part by gift and exchange. The total number of volumes in the Library at the close of the year was 1,631,422.

The total amount expended for books, periodicals, newspapers, photographs, and other library material from the city appropriation and from the trust funds income was $179,973.00.

USE OF THE LIBRARY

The home use of books for the year was 5,567,681. The use of material within the Library's premises for reference and study is for the most part unrestricted, and it is therefore impracticable to record it.

In addition to the above noted use of the Central Library and the thirty-four Branch Libraries, deposits of books were made available to 338 agencies, including engine houses, institutions, and schools.

REVISED ORGANIZATION PLAN FOR THE LIBRARY

On September 12 the Board adopted a revised plan of organization for the Library. In accordance therewith the Director was requested to investigate the arrangement of personnel and the like necessary for putting the plan into effect.

BUILDINGS AND EQUIPMENT

During 1932 there were opened to the public three new branch library buildings: for the Faneuil Branch Library, the Boylston Branch Library, and the Jeffries Point Branch Library. These were constructed under a special appropriation of $200,000 approved for the purpose on March 3, 1931. The architects of the Faneuil Branch were Kilham, Hopkins, & Greeley; for the Boylston Branch, Maginnis & Walsh; for the Jeffries Point Branch, Thomas Williams.

At the Central Library considerable attention was given to the problem of the level of the ground water in the vicinity of Copley Square, particularly as this affects the piling and the foundations of the Central Library building. In the study of the problem the aid of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology was enlisted. The study was initiated promptly and was still being actively carried on as the fiscal year 1932 came to its end, a report being expected in the new year.

GIFTS

There was received a bequest of $2000 under the will of the late Horace G. Wadlin, Librarian of the Boston Public Library from 1903 to 1917. The bequest was funded, with the income to be used for the purchase of books.

Mr. Harry C. Bentley presented to the Library his collection of Early American Works on Accounting and expressed his desire to add subsequently to the collection as additional appropriate items should become available. He presented as well the sum of $220.38 in connection with the purchase of certain items.

The Beacon Hill Garden Club made available a much appreciated gift in the way of adequate planting for the grounds of the West End Branch Library.

The Library received during the year many important gifts of books and other library material. A list of the principal gifts is to be found in the Appendix on pages 42-44.

TRUST FUNDS

The Trustees welcome bequests of money and hope that generous testators may remember the Library. It is from such sources only that they can make purchases of rare and other important books that give value and prestige to a great educational institution such as the Library has become.

As a matter of interest to the public the Board has pleasure in listing herein the present trust funds of the Library, with explanatory notes. This list will be found on pages 45-55.

REPORT OF THE EXAMINING COMMITTEE
TO THE TRUSTEES OF THE PUBLIC LIBRARY
OF THE CITY OF BOSTON.

Gentlemen:

The Examining Committee submits its report for 1932.

In accordance with the suggestions made in the last report, the Committee met in October and substantially completed its work by December first. The sub-committees were in part reorganized so as to avoid overlapping. The thirty-three branch libraries were divided into eleven groups of three each, and two members were assigned to visit each group. A list of suggestions was given to the sub-committees and to the visitors to branches, to assist them in their examinations. These changes have all worked well, and we advise that they be continued, with the additional recommendation that the Examining Committee be appointed, and its sub-committees designated, in the spring or early summer, so as to give ample time for investigation while not postponing the final report beyond December first.

This report is mainly made up from the reports of the sub-committees. These are on file and should be consulted for further details.

I. GENERAL POLICIES

It has seemed best not to attempt an extended survey of the general policies of the Library, but at this particular time and under the present circumstances to consider four subjects.

1. What shall be the policy of the Library in a time of depression? Shall it expand, or contract, its service?

At our request the Director has furnished us with some very interesting statistics showing the increased use of the Library during the period of depression. In substance, while about 5% represents the increase over the preceding year in each of the four years up to 1931, the increase in 1931 exceeded 13% over 1930; and, in the twelve months from November 1, 1931 to October 31, 1932, there was an increase of more than 16% over the corresponding period preceding. In 1928 43% of users of the Branch Libraries were adults and 57% children. In the ten months of 1932 the ratio was just reversed — 57% being adults and 43% children. These figures seem to show the result of the depression. The important question is what shall be the policy.

It is obvious that in a time of depression each department of the city must make its contribution to the general situation. The customary contribution, of course, in most departments would be a decreased budget. But there are departments, the work of which may be of distinct service in a time of depression. No one, of course, would suggest that a public welfare department should cut down its activities, or contract its appropriations. There are other departments which, in a lesser degree, might also be of great service in such a time. Such a department, we believe, is the Library.

The unemployed naturally have leisure. The great problem of the future may be to find out how that leisure can be best employed, and the fact that leisure is enforced does not alter the problem. The old adage that Satan finds mischief for idle hands to do is never more applicable than in a time of depression, and we believe it is an important function of the municipal authorities to furnish something for idle hands, and heads as well, if they possibly can. It is just the time to throw open the resources of the Library to the unemployed. Under guidance they can certainly improve themselves, and, if they are only entertained, it is much better to have them entertained in a library, with its surroundings, than to have them entertained on the street corner, or in other places far less desirable. The resources of the Library, if they get used to them, will enable them to bear their troubles with more patience, and even fit themselves rather better for what may come when there is an upward swing of the pendulum.

Furthermore, we must not forget that it is among the unemployed, with their suffering, their anxiety, and their fears, that the seeds of discontent are chiefly sown, which may blossom out into movements quite inimical to our institutions. In the present depression there is probably nothing that has been so striking as the patience, the courage, and the endurance which the unemployed have manifested. But it is not wise to depend too much upon the continuance of these virtues. Instead, therefore, of leaving the unemployed on the street corner to listen to the first demagogue who comes along, it would be a very wise move for the city in its own defense, and for a deeper and broader reason than merely consideration for the unemployed, to give them an opportunity in the Library.

We therefore recommend that the resources of the Library be not lessened, but if possible increased, or at all events continued as they are. We further recommend that every effort be made by the staff of the Library to furnish to the unemployed suggestions as to the use of the Library, by printed circulars, printed lists of books, and, in general, such advice as the staff may have the opportunity to give.

2. The relationship of the Library to the various colleges and schools in our vicinity.

This is a very important problem and deserves careful consideration. Some definite policy should be adopted.

We believe that it is of great advantage to our community, in ways which it is not necessary to enumerate, that we should continue, as we already are, to be a great centre for scholarly research. The Library may well do its best, in conjunction with other libraries, to furnish advanced scholars with all reasonable facilities for research; this should not be abbreviated.

But it is quite a different matter when the institutions of learning, schools and colleges, go farther than this and endeavor to save their own finances by having the Library furnish the books for reference and collateral reading required by their pupils, which in fact they should furnish themselves, at least to the extent of having adequate library facilities for the work done in their departments. This throws an unnecessary burden upon the public treasury and interferes very much with the use the citizens ought to have of the facilities of the Library. If a college or school is to be started, it certainly ought to have an adequate library — just as it ought to have an adequate laboratory in the event that it undertakes to teach any of the physical sciences. It ought not to expect the city to provide the books and facilities for the ordinary pupils — whatever may be the policy of the Library as to opportunities for reading and research to be given to the advanced scholars.

We therefore recommend that a conference be called with the authorities of the various colleges and schools in the vicinity, the pupils of which have been accustomed to use our Library, and that a frank explanation of the attitude of the Library be given at this conference, in the effort to obtain some working system under which the Library will not be put to the expense of providing books which should be made available from other sources. We believe that such a conference would be productive of good. But, if it does not result in the determination of any policy, we think that the Trustees should consider very carefully whether there should not be a limitation put to the use of the Library in this fashion.

3. The problem of publicity.

At the present time, publicity is essential to any undertaking, and the Library is no exception to this rule. The objects of publicity for the Library may be at least two-fold. In the first place, publicity is necessary to increase the circulation of books among the people, and to give them a knowledge of what they possess in this great storehouse of books. At the present time we do not need publicity of this nature because it would be impossible to satisfy, with our present resources, any demand which would thus be stimulated. When means are at hand it will be well to investigate the possibility of establishing additional branches in department stores, factories, etc.

The second object of publicity is to interest in the Library many persons of means and cultivation who are not at present interested in it at all. The Library ought to build up a background of interest — such as is displayed by those who contribute to the Museum of Fine Arts and to the Symphony Orchestra. The possession of this great accumulation of books is as much of cultural influence as either the production of art or of music, and tends to make its contribution to the general position of Boston as a centre for scholarly and cultural research. If this be admitted in theory, it of course requires much thought and consideration to put it into practice, and perhaps many experiments may fail before any experiment is reasonably successful. We therefore do not undertake to point out in what ways this publicity can be gained; we merely mention the general policy, which should be, as we believe, to interest persons of means and cultivation in the Library, so that the Library may be sustained not only by their interest, but also in practical ways by their munificence; we must keep up books of the higher type if we are to be a great centre of research.

We recommend that a fund be placed at the disposal of the Director, to be expended in making such experiments as he may believe to be effective in gaining this type of publicity. If such a fund cannot come from the city appropriation, it might well be supplied out of unrestricted trust funds.

4. Changes to render the branch libraries less institutional.

Of course the first idea that comes to the mind of anyone who learns of a branch library is that it is merely a place for giving out books, without subjecting the recipient to the trouble of going to the central library. That of course is its prime function. But the branch library has the possibility of very much more. And in some branch libraries this has been undertaken. It may be made physically attractive to its community; it may serve as a community centre to stimulate a taste for reading; and in various other directions it may develop more homogeneity than is customarily found in these large urban centres.

We feel that this type of work can well be extended in some branches, whereas in others it cannot be engaged in to advantage. We suggest to the branch librarians that, where it is possible, they consider in what way such extension can take place.

II. ADMINISTRATION

Three topics have been considered, and the recommendations in connection with each of them are given herewith.

1. To review the business and office practices of the Library, with a view to their development along up-to-date and efficient lines.

We recommend that the entire administration of the library and the branches be studied with a view to relieving the Director of passing on unnecessary details, and placing more responsibility in the hands of each department head. The time and energies of the Director under the present system of organization must be taken up with decisions upon details of operation, which could be made adequately by appropriate subordinates. The Director's duties should be more largely related to problems of principle and policy. To this end we recommend the establishment of three main divisions in the Library's organization. Each of these should be headed by responsible officers who can relieve the Director of much of his present unnecessary executive burden and at the same time coördinate the work of the many existing independent departments along large functional lines. These three functional lines — and therefore the three main divisions into which the organization might fall — seem to us to be substantially the following:

- a.* Circulation (branch libraries)
- b.* Reference (central library)
- c.* Business operations (the business management of the entire library system).

We believe that such an organization will prove much more economical and efficient and will eliminate duplication of records. To bring this about would necessitate some rearrangement of the physical location of certain groups whose activities are analogous, and concentrating them, thus bringing them into closer contact. We believe that, if this were done, it might be possible to introduce new methods or modernize methods now in use.

In connection with the suggestion that the administration be divided under three main divisions, it would be expected that the heads of those divisions might be selected from the Library's present force, but we believe that this matter is of such great importance that, unless such skilled assistants could be found there, some of these positions, as least, might have to be filled from the outside.

If such an organization as suggested could be worked out, we believe that many of the problems facing the Library's administration might be solved with ultimate savings in labor, including the problem of the increased use of the Library which has appeared during the present period.

2. To consider the problem of missing, stolen and mutilated books.

We appreciate that these problems face all institutions of this character. Many libraries have inaugurated the policy of obliging all users, both in the main library and in the branches, to check all bags and packages at the entrance. This should be studied carefully, and if possible developed irrespective of possible criticisms and hardships.

We have been surprised to learn the ease with which access to the stacks is possible, and temptations placed in the way of young employees. Apparently, risk of loss may be minimized by a curtailment in the number of exits from the main stacks.

The question of cutting off entirely to the public the entrance on the Blagden Street side of the main library, and the cutting off of access to stacks from the rest and recreation rooms of the employees, should be given early consideration. It might be possible even to fence off some portions, if not all, from access except to those entitled to entrance.

A study should be made of some better follow-up policy on books, but we believe that the centralization of departmental work as suggested would assist materially in locating lost books. Also, in connection with the reorganization of the Library, it might be well to consider the shifting of the present force of the library to day and night work instead of having extra assistance at night.

The Trustees have recently had an experience in connection with the remitting of fines. We recommend that those to whom fines have been remitted be put on probation, and that, unless such persons meet the library requirements as to conduct and morals, they be prevented from further use of the Library for some definite period.

In connection with the mutilation of books: So far as these appear in the departments used by minors, we suggest that co-operation be sought between the teachers of schools and the heads of the children's departments, to the end that, in courses in schools that call for illustrative materials, such minors be called upon to report where such illustrations have been procured, and that, furthermore, the school authorities be urged to require only such illustrations as may be found in the daily papers and Sunday supplements. It might be worth considering for each one of the children's departments to have a supply of illustrated papers, which might be procured if necessary from the outside, from which illustrations might be cut.

3. The Departments of Printing and Binding.

These departments are ably managed and are doing excellent work, but, here as elsewhere, we believe that a more intimate supervision and tie-up with the three main divisions recommended in this report, would add to their efficiency, and probably effect some saving.

III. BUILDINGS AND EQUIPMENT

While we do not expect that structural changes involving large expense can be made at present, we wish to call the attention of the Trustees to certain defects in the Central Library, some of which they may find remediable.

1. The lighting of the Abbey and Sargent pictures should be improved. Probably the advice of the lighting engineers at the Art Museum, who are familiar with such problems, might be obtained.

2. The Newspaper Room needs better ventilation. The floor is out of repair. It might be better if the regular entrance were through the door from the outside lobby. Newspapers are now carefully stored in the basement; of these the early American issues ought to be placed in fireproof cabinets.

3. The Statistical Department, which might better be termed the Department of Economics and Documents, should have a more convenient and suitable approach.

4. When it becomes possible to make alterations in the building, the Children's Room should be on the ground floor with a separate entrance.

IV. BOOKS

1. We advise that the method now followed in the choice of fiction for adults, viz., selection by a group of competent examiners, be extended to non-fiction and juvenile material, so that books may be selected and purchased more systematically than at present.

2. We also advise that, in the distribution of books among the branches, more attention be paid to the particular types of books required in each branch. Statistics as to the use of books now compiled in each branch may readily be amplified so as to classify fiction and non-fiction in as much detail as may be found desirable. The result of such classifications, transmitted frequently to the Central Library, would serve as a basis for the allotment of books to the several branches. The trend of population in each district should also guide in determining the kind of books to be supplied.

V. THE SPECIAL LIBRARIES

1. We urge upon the Trustees the necessity of taking immediate measures to preserve from further injury the rare and valuable books in the Barton-Ticknor Room. The absence of proper ventilation and the lack of moisture are producing the most deplorable effects upon many of them. The steam pipes should be covered with asbestos, humidifiers should be installed, an oil dressing should be applied to many of the bindings, and the more valuable volumes, at least, should be treated by an expert binder.

NEW BUILDING OF THE FANEUIL BRANCH LIBRARY

Opened March 28, 1932

2. In the Fine Arts Room a leaking roof should be repaired and the large collection of prints should be catalogued.

3. Some of the young men employed in these and other departments are given, besides the usual vacation, an extra month for service in military training camps. Their prolonged absence throws upon the employees who remain an added burden which should be lightened.

VI. CHILDREN'S DEPARTMENT AND WORK WITH SCHOOLS

The Children's Room in the Central Library is in excellent condition. The Teachers' Room needs better lighting for the lower shelves, which could be given if the present lighting fixtures, or some of them, were to be turned down instead of up as they now are. The Adams collection occupies shelves in this room much needed for educational works. So the American Merchant Marine Library occupies needed space in the Branch Issue Department. It is desirable that such libraries, not a part of the Library's collections, be housed outside of the building.

2. The system of sending out books to schools as loan collections, whether from the Central Library or from branches, should be thoroughly examined and revised. Books are often left in class rooms for an unreasonable time, and it is doubtful whether they are used to the best advantage. A committee made up of representatives of the Library and of the schools might well study the situation, and if possible evolve a plan whereby these books sent to the schools might give a maximum amount of service to a maximum number of children, and whereby also the librarians of the branch libraries might be brought into closer touch with the schools in their neighborhood, so as to assist teachers and children to make more profitable use of the facilities of the branch library, and especially to turn the attention of the children to the better books. More, too, should be done in the schools to teach children to respect books, and not to soil or mutilate them.

3. We suggest that in the branch libraries, while the younger children have their own room, another section be reserved for readers between the ages of fifteen and eighteen years inclusive, so that the section reserved for adults may be kept as a quiet place for older people.

VII. BRANCHES

From the reports of the sub-committees on the various branches we draw these general conclusions.

1. A library should not be housed in a building used also for other purposes, whether municipal, school, or business.

2. The departments for children and adults should be so far separated that the greater confusion and noise which naturally must exist in the children's department may not disturb adult readers.

3. The condition of ventilation in the several branches should be examined and improvement made where needed and practicable.

4. A careful examination should be made of the lighting arrangements in all branches, to the end that there may be sufficient light for reading and study.

5. Linoleum or other suitable floor covering should be placed on floors over which many people pass. Good air, light, and quiet are primary requirements in a library.

6. Speaking tubes or telephones should be installed for easy communication between departments on different floors or otherwise separated.

We believe that in some branches, at any rate, improvements of the above nature could be made without prohibitory expense and would make conditions much better for librarians and readers.

In the following list mention is made of some of the more pressing needs of the several branches. More detailed statements will be found in the visitors' reports on file.

ALLSTON. Should be relocated nearer schools. Linoleum needed.

ANDREW SQUARE. In excellent condition.

BOYLSTON. New. No suggestions.

BRIGHTON. Linoleum should be laid in basement and repaired on first floor. Lighting too high.

CHARLESTOWN. Adults should be on ground floor and children on floor above. Ventilation in lecture room bad.

CITY POINT. Better rest rooms needed which could be had by using probation officer's room. Noisy floor. Lighting should be improved.

CODMAN SQUARE. Much used by children, and hence noisy for adults.

DORCHESTER. Telephone or speaking-tube needed between adults' and children's departments. Baby clinic twice a week should be removed. Lighting satisfactory.

EAST BOSTON. General condition good. Rearrangement of counter in children's room needed. Better rest room could be made in basement.

FANEUIL. New. Lecture Hall may be required later for reading room.

FELLOWES ATHENÆUM. Better signs desirable.

HYDE PARK. Wiring in basement not up to present requirements. More linoleum needed to deaden noise.

JAMAICA PLAIN. Work-room needed.

JEFFRIES POINT. Bad ventilation. Outside sign desirable.

KIRSTEIN. Much used, and needs more space. Subject catalogue needed.

LOWER MILLS. In good condition.

MATTAPAN. New. No suggestions.

MEMORIAL. Confusion, as adults and children are in one large room with one central desk. Room on street floor might be used for separate department. Means of communication with janitor's room needed.

MOUNT BOWDOIN. Rest room used for book repairing, for which it is not adapted. Telephone extension in main library advised. Exit passageway too narrow. New building between Mount Bowdoin and Codman Square desirable.

MOUNT PLEASANT. Poorly lighted and planned. Interfered with by other municipal uses in same building.

NEPONSET. Wholly inadequate. Much used and only one room.

NORTH END. Lighted signs needed at entrance. Room for adults should be extended into lecture room. Floor needs repair. Greatly increased use. Good collection of Italian books.

ORIENT HEIGHTS. Adults and children cannot be properly separated. Lower janitor's entrance should have lights.

PARKER HILL. New. Speaker's stand and screen in auditorium desirable.

PHILLIPS BROOKS. Ventilation difficult. Floor noisy.

ROSLINDALE. Too small and has gymnasium overhead. Other quarters desirable. Light for desk in children's section needed.

ROXBURY CROSSING. Should ultimately be moved. Bad ventilation. Floor noisy.

SOUTH BOSTON. Better rest room needed. Lighting system bad and should be improved as soon as possible.

SOUTH END. Very much used. Ventilation poor.

TYLER STREET. Entrance not well marked. Noise from gymnasium overhead.

UPHAM'S CORNER. Telephone between adults' and children's rooms necessary. Extra shelves and counter desk should be put in.

WEST END. Roof leaks. Lighting in children's room poor. Ventilation should be improved.

WEST ROXBURY. Working quarters might be better arranged. Floor covering in assembly room especially needed. Curbing for lawn desirable.

While this report is largely concerned with improvements which we think desirable, we are not unmindful of the great amount of good work that is being done. In the Central Library, and in the branches, we have found the librarians and assistants working intelligently and devotedly, making the best of often unsatisfactory conditions and well maintaining the high standards of the Library.

REPORT OF THE DIRECTOR

TO THE TRUSTEES OF THE PUBLIC LIBRARY
OF THE CITY OF BOSTON:

I submit herewith the report of the Director of the Library for the year ending December 31, 1932.

EFFECTS OF THE DEPRESSION

During the year the Library experienced to an increasing degree the effects of the economic depression. On the positive side this was to be noted in an appreciably increased number of individuals using the entire library system and in a greatly increased number of books lent to borrowers. On the negative side it was to be perceived in decreased appropriations from the City for the support of the Library.

INCREASED USE OF THE LIBRARY

By the end of 1932 the number of individuals registered for taking books had reached the total of 194,517. There were then 23,341 more than at the same time a year earlier, an increase of 14%. That the effects of the depression were at work was evident. For instance, in 1929 45% of the borrowers from the branch libraries were adults and 55% children; by the end of 1932 the ratio had been just reversed, 55% being adults and 45% children. Such a change was apparently not a reflection of fewer children borrowing fewer books; on the contrary in 1932 more children were borrowing more books than ever before. It was more than all else a reflection of the fact that more and more books were being borrowed by more and more adults. Presumably most of the new adult users of the Library came from the ranks of the unemployed.

In their leisure the unemployed everywhere have apparently turned to the public library. There seems otherwise to be no reasonable explanation of the greatly increased use of the Library during these last three years, including 1932. Since 1929 there has occurred an increase of 42% in the number of books borrowed for home use. The number lent during 1932 alone was 18% greater than the number lent in 1931. The following table indicates what has happened:

	NO. OF BOOKS LENT FOR HOME USE	PERCENTAGE OF INCREASE OVER PRECEDING YEAR	PERCENTAGE OF INCREASE OVER 1929
1929	3,930,068
1930	4,133,459 5% 5%
1931	4,702,932 13% 20%
1932	5,567,681 18% 42%

In connection with these figures it is of interest to note that, whereas the average percentage of increase for the public libraries of the country at large during the three years was 37%, the percentage of increase for the Boston Public Library was 42%. It should also be borne in mind that the above figures record only a part of the use of the Library, i.e., the number of books borrowed for home reading. No recorded use of books within the Library's premises is available; it has been evident, however, that the latter has increased markedly. The total effect has been by the end of 1932 to make acute the need for additional assistants and for more books, old as well as new. This need is interestingly presented from still another point of view on pages 14-16 above in the Report of this year's Examining Committee.

DECREASED APPROPRIATIONS

With the beginning of the year it became clear that in facing the greatly increasing demands noted above the Library was to have appreciably decreased funds with which to carry on its work. The City appropriated for its support during 1932 the amount of $1,168,155. This was a reduction of $94,349 from the amount appropriated for the preceding year 1931. Operating expenses had, of course, to be reduced. This was accomplished in such a way as not unduly to hamper the Library in meeting the ever increasing demands of the public.

Fortunately it was not necessary to curtail the hours of opening throughout the library system, except for a Sunday closing of the branch libraries and a shortening of the Sunday hours at the central library.

The appropriation for the purchase of books, however, suffered appreciably. This was reduced from $175,000 in 1931 to $160,000 in 1932. The effect was that, while more and more books were being used, read, and worn out, fewer and fewer copies were being purchased to meet the demands for books, old and new, and particularly to replace those worn out from heavy, constant use.

Improvement of physical facilities had to be put aside for better days. The ten year building program, initiated in 1930, for the construction of two new branch library buildings each year came to a stop early in 1932, just as there were being completed the new buildings begun in 1931 for the Faneuil Branch in Brighton, the Boylston Branch in Jamaica Plain, and the Jeffries Point Branch in East Boston.

Yet, despite budgetary restrictions in nearly all directions, the Library completed the year doing 42% more business than in the last of the so-called boom years (1929). No appreciable additions had been made to the library staff during the three years. All of the additional work had been taken on by the staff, individually and jointly, in excellent spirit.

DEVELOPMENT OF A REVISED PLAN OF ORGANIZATION

In carrying on an amount of work so greatly augmented it became more and more clear that the existing plan of organization of the Library was not entirely adequate for effective administration. The need for recasting its lines had already been recognized even before the 1932 growth in work made it increasingly evident. With the advent of a new library administration early in 1932 the problem became at once an object of study.

The plan under which the Library had been operating for many years was characterized by a relatively high degree of centralization. The result has been that the time and energies of the Director have perforce been taken up with the necessity of making decisions upon details of operation. The remedy has therefore seemed to lie in the development and appointment of appropriate subordinate officers to assume responsibility for the detailed operation of the Library, so that the Director may be free to concern himself actively with the general duties that are properly his.

It was with a view to meeting this need that there was adopted in September a revised plan of organization. This is based upon a recognition of the large functional lines along which the major activities of the Library fall, namely:

1. circulation of books (centered largely in the branch libraries);
2. reference use of books (concentrated chiefly in the central library);
3. business operations (the business management of the entire library system).

In recognition of these the new plan provides for the establishing of three main divisions for the organization of the Library — a Circulation Division, a Reference Division, and a Division of Business Operations. Within these it is proposed to arrange the sixty-five or so departments and branch libraries existing at present. A responsible officer is to be named to head each of the three divisions, who with subordinate officers will be responsible for the entire functioning of his division. The three division heads are to be responsible directly to the Director; they will be the second ranking officers of the Library. It is intended that the Director will thus become the general administrator of the entire library system, while the three division heads will be the active executive officers for their respective divisions. The effect will be a decentralization from the Director down one grade, and then up to that grade a centralization at three separate points.

The development and application of the plan in detail will be spread over several years. Some of the steps can be accomplished in the year to come. Others must await the evolution of proper and suitable conditions before being attempted. All will, of course, be subject to change or revision as necessary or desirable.

PERSONNEL.

The implications of the above changes are many for the personnel of the Library. Perhaps the most important is that extensive training of personnel is necessary for the full success of the proposed developments. An appreciably large number of individuals within the library staff must be constantly in training for higher responsibilities. And, which is most important for these individuals, there must be an ample number of intermediate positions at all grades in which they can gain experience and recognition.

To aid in meeting these training requirements it is proposed that the training courses offered by the Library be recast on lines differing appreciably from those prevailing since the establishment of the Library Training Class in 1927. In June the Training Class completed its fifth academic year. It did not resume in October its program along the usual lines. Instead preparation was instituted upon a new program to be put into effect in 1933. The aim of this will be to afford formal training to those who have the will and the ability to develop themselves for increased responsibilities. The sole requirements for pursuing the new training courses will be a willingness to work and an ability to achieve.

It is clear that the members of the present staff of the Library will in most instances wish to take advantage of opportunities for improving the service which they render to the public. The spirit in which they have carried on the many activities of the Library under heavily increased demands during the past year is indicative of that. It is a pleasure to testify here to the excellence of that spirit.

Outside of the entrance of a new Director into office on February 1, there is only one important change in personnel during the year that has to be noted. On August 31, Miss Florence F. Richards, Assistant in the Shelf Department in the Central Library, retired under the provisions of the Boston Retirement Act. She was the senior member of the staff in length of service, having been in the employ of the Library for fifty-five years.

CONCLUSION

In view of the fact that the limitations of space have prevented a detailed presentation of the work of the individual branch libraries and departments, attention is called particularly to the statistical summaries of their work that appear in the Appendix to this Report.

The Director wishes to express in conclusion his deep appreciation of the excellent support which he has received from Trustees and Library Staff alike. He is grateful for it.

Respectfully submitted,

MILTON E. LORD,

Director
